WWII U.S. Aircraft Manufacturers

Factories in Production in Early 1944

By Stephen Sherman, Apr. 2001. Updated January 23, 2012.

This page differs from the other pages in this site.

Rather than summarizing what I have already learned, here I am laying out what I would like to learn and what memories I would like to help preserve. World War Two was essentially an "industrial war," a war in which the productive manufacturing capacity of the United States ultimately made the difference. Great companies like Grumman, North American, Republic, Curtiss-Wright are now gone, but in the 1940's, they constituted the backbone of America's industrial capacity.

As I gather information, I'll make separate pages for the individual plants.

If you or a relative worked in one of these plants, and have information to share, please email me, Webmaster, so that the information could be included on this site.

Mark Reynosa, an aerospace engineer who is very familiar with the West Coast aircraft production facilities. His family has been in aerospace since World War II and has worked in a number of the West Coast facilities. He has visited nearly all West Coast aircraft production facilities and is familiar with wartime production at these sites. He is also an author with Schiffer Publishing and is in the process of writing the history of the plants in Southern California.

Manhattan, Kansas

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Coordinates: 38°11′30″N 96°35′30″W

Manhattan is a city located in the northeastern part of the state of Kansas in the United States, at the junction of the Kansas River and Big Blue River. It is the county seat^[a] of Riley County and the city extends into Pottawatomie County. As of the 2010 census, the city population was 52,281.^[7] It is the principal city of the Manhattan, Kansas Metropolitan Statistical Area – with an estimated population of 113,629, the Manhattan MSA is the fourth largest metropolitan area in the state.^[8]

Nicknamed "The Little Apple" as a play on New York City's "Big Apple", it is best known as being the home of Kansas State University and has a college town atmosphere. Eight miles (13 km) west of the city is Fort Riley, a United States Army post.

In 2007, CNN and Money magazine rated Manhattan as one of the ten best places in America to retire young.^[9] The town was named an All-American City in 1952, becoming the first city in Kansas to win the award. In 2011, Forbes rated Manhattan No. 1 for "Best Small Communities for a Business and Career."^[10]

Olathe, Kansas

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Coordinates: 38°52′51″N 94°48′11″W

Olathe (/ˈoʊˈlætə/ oh-LAY-tə) is a city in and is the county seat of Johnson County, Kansas, United States.^[7] Located in northeastern Kansas, it is also the fifth most populous city in the state, with a population of 125,872 at the 2010 census.^[8] As a suburb of Kansas City, Missouri, Olathe is the fourth-largest city in the Kansas City Metropolitan Area. It is bordered by the cities of Lenexa to the north, Overland Park to the east, and Gardner to the southwest. In 2008, the US Census Bureau ranked Olathe the 24th fastest-growing city in the nation.^{[9][10]} The same year, CNNMoney and Money magazine ranked Olathe #11 on its list of the "100 Best Cities to Live in the United States."^[11]

History

19th century

Olathe was founded by Dr. John T. Barton in the spring of 1857. He rode to the center of Johnson County, Kansas, and staked two quarter sections of land as the town site. He later described his ride to friends: "...the prairie was covered with verbena and other wild flowers. I kept thinking the land was beautiful and that I should name the town Beautiful."^[citation needed] Purportedly, Barton asked a Shawnee interpreter how to say "Beautiful" in his native language. The interpreter responded, "Olathe."^[12]

Olathe was not the first city established in Johnson County, but it quickly became the largest and was named the county seat in October 1859.^[12] The city's early days were filled with violence, as pro-slavery forces from nearby Missouri often clashed with local abolitionists. These conflicts were known on a large scale as Bleeding Kansas.

As the 1850s came to a close, and as Kansas entered the Union as a free state in 1861, the violence lessened. However, a year later Confederate guerillas from Missouri led by William Quantrill surprised the residents and raided the city on September 7, 1862, killing a half dozen men, robbing numerous businesses and private homes, and destroying most of the city.

Political activities of the Koch brothers

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Charles G. Koch and David H. Koch are the sons of Fred C. Koch. Their father founded the second-largest privately held company in the United States, Koch Industries. After having bought out two other brothers' interests, these two brothers remain in control of the family business and future left to them by their father. They also control the Koch Family Foundations.

The Koch brothers contribute a large amount of money to conservative, libertarian, and free-market individuals and organizations.^[1] They have given more than $196 million to dozens of free-market and advocacy organizations.^[1] Tax records indicate that, in 2008, the three main Koch family foundations contributed to 34 political and policy organizations, three of which they founded, and several of which they direct.^{[1][2]}

Background [edit]

The phrase "Koch brothers" generally refers to the sons of Fred C. Koch.^{[1][4][5][6]} The most political sons are Charles G. Koch and David H. Koch who bought out their brothers Frederick and Bill in 1983.^[7]

David H. Koch was a Libertarian Vice-Presidential candidate in 1980. He advocated the abolition of Social Security, the FBI, the CIA, and public schools.^{[8][9]} Koch put $500,000 of his own money into the race,^[8] and he and Ed Clark, his presidential running mate, won 1.1% of the vote—the best Libertarian showing in a U.S. presidential race to date.^[10] But the experience caused David Koch to change course: "I had enough," he said. "We are not a nation that debates issues. We vote on candidates' personalities." By 1984, David had parted company with the Libertarian Party, because, he said, "they nominated a ticket I wasn't happy with" and "so many of the hard-core Libertarian ideas are unrealistic."^[11] Since then, Charles and David Koch have adopted a much less visible strategy toward advancing their libertarian positions. Interested in maintaining their privacy, they prefer to spend on donations to non-profit groups who do not disclose donors.^{[11][1]}

Charles G. Koch funds and supports libertarian and free-market organizations such as the Cato Institute,^[12] which he co-founded with Edward H. Crane and Murray Rothbard in 1977,^[13] and is a board member at the Mercatus Center, a market-oriented research think tank at George Mason University. Koch supported his brother's candidacy for Vice President on the Libertarian Party ticket in 1980.^[11] After the bid, Charles told a reporter that conventional politics "tends to be a nasty, corrupting business ... I'm interested in advancing libertarian ideas"^[14] In addition to funding think tanks, Charles and David also support libertarian academics,^[14] since 1992, Charles has funded the Charles G. Koch Summer

Wichita, Kansas

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Coordinates: 37°41′20″N 97°20′10″W

For other uses, see Wichita.

Wichita (/ˈwɪtʃə/; WICH-ə-tay^[a]) is the largest city in the U.S. state of Kansas.^[7] According to the 2013 United States Census Bureau estimate, the city population was 385,577.^[8] Located in south-central Kansas on the Arkansas River, Wichita is the county seat of Sedgwick County and the principal city of the Wichita metropolitan area.^[9] As of 2011, the metro area had a population of 530,721,^[10] the Wichita–Winfield combined statistical area (CSA) population was 661,798.^[8]

The city was incorporated in 1870, based on the success of businessmen who came to hunt and trade with native populations. Wichita's position on the Chisholm Trail made it a destination for cattle drives heading north to access railroads to eastern markets.^{[11][12]}

From the early to late 20th century, aircraft pioneers such as Clyde Cessna, "Matty" Laird, Lloyd Stearman, Walter Beech, Al Mooney and Bill Lear began aircraft-manufacturing enterprises that would lead to Wichita becoming the nation's leading city in numbers of aircraft produced, and its nicknaming as the Air Capital of the World. The aircraft corporations E. M. Laird Aviation Company (the nation's first successful commercial airplane manufacturer), Travel Air (started by Beech, Stearman and Cessna), Stearman, Cessna, Beechcraft and Mooney were all founded in Wichita between 1926 and early 1932.^[13] By 1931, Boeing (of Seattle, Washington) had absorbed Stearman, creating "Boeing-Wichita", which would eventually grow to become Kansas' largest employer.^{[14][15]}

Today, Cessna Aircraft Co. (the world's highest-volume airplane manufacturer) and Beechcraft remain based in Wichita, along with Learjet and Boeing's chief subassembly supplier, Spirit AeroSystems. Both Airbus and Boeing maintain a workforce in Wichita, and Bombardier (parent company of Learjet) has other divisions in Wichita as well. Over 50 other aviation businesses operate in the Wichita MSA, as well dozens of suppliers and subcontractors to the local aircraft manufacturers. In total, Wichita and its companies have manufactured an estimated 250,000 aircraft since Clyde Cessna's first Wichita-built aircraft in 1916.^{[14][16][17][18]}

In 2007, Wichita built 577 aircraft, ranging from single-engine light aircraft to the world's fastest civilian jet, one-fifth of the civilian aircraft produced in United States that year, plus numerous small military aircraft.^{[15][17][18][19]}

A legacy of the early 20th-Century oil boom in neighboring Butler County, Kansas, Wichita became a major oil town, with dozens of oil exploration companies and support enterprises. Most famous of these was Koch Industries, today a global natural-resources empire, and one of America's two largest privately held companies, still headquartered in Wichita. The city was also at one time the headquarters of the former Derby Oil Company, which was purchased by Coastal Corporation in 1988.

An area cultural center, Wichita is home to Intrust Bank Arena as well as numerous nightclubs, restaurants, shopping centers, museums and parks. Several universities are in Wichita, the largest being Wichita State University with an enrollment of 15,000 students. In July 2006, CRIMoney and Money magazine ranked Wichita 9th on its list of the 10 best U.S. big cities in which to live.^[20] In 2008, MSN Real Estate ranked Wichita 1st on its list of most affordable cities.^[21] Wichita was also named most "Uniquely American" city by Newsmax Magazine.^[22]

Kansas

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Coordinates: 38°5′N 97°W﻿ / ﻿38.083°N 97°W﻿ / 38.083; -97

This article is about the US state. For the American progressive rock band, see Kansas (band). For other uses, see Kansas (disambiguation).

Kansas (/ˈkɑːnsəz/) is a U.S. state located in the Midwestern United States.^[1] It is named after the Kansas River which flows through it, which in turn was named after the Kansa Native American tribe, which inhabited the area.^[2] The tribe's name (natively kkaꞑ ze) is often said to mean "people of the wind" or "people of the south wind," although this was probably not the term's original meaning.^{[1][3]} Residents of Kansas are called "Kansans." For thousands of years what is now Kansas was home to numerous and diverse Native American tribes. Tribes in the Eastern part of the state generally lived in villages along the river valleys. Tribes in the Western part of the state were semi-nomadic and hunted large herds of bison. Kansas was first settled by European Americans in the 1830s, but the pace of settlement accelerated in the 1850s, in the midst of political wars over the slavery issue.

When officially opened to settlement by the U.S. government in 1854, abolitionist Free-Staters from New England and pro-slavery settlers from neighboring Missouri rushed to the territory to determine if Kansas would become a free state or a slave state. Thus, the area was a hotbed of violence and chaos in its early days as these forces collided, and was known as Bleeding Kansas. The abolitionists eventually prevailed and on January 29, 1861,^{[9][10]} Kansas entered the Union as a free state. After the Civil War, the population of Kansas grew rapidly, when waves of immigrants turned the prairie into farmland. Today, Kansas is one of the most productive agricultural states, producing high yields of wheat, sorghum and sunflowers.^[11] Kansas is the 15th most extensive and the 33rd most populous of the 50 United States.

DEEP UNDERGROUND MILITARY BASES IN AMERICA

Unknown to most Americans is a dark secret, and it's right under our noses. It's the reality of the existence of DEEP UNDERGROUND MILITARY BASES. These Underground bases get prominent play in dark rumors circulating about captured extraterrestrials and alien technology. The fringe culture rumors of underground alien-human shenanigans are in reality fed by leaks from questionable individuals, usually with intelligence connections. They are simply a ploy utility for the status quo. The whole captured-alien-hardware story is just a highly elaborate hoax to discredit those exposing the reality of these bases. They are also a cover for the wholesale looting of the federal treasury by the corrupt and cynical secret government. After Hurricane Katrina left the gulf coast region totally devastated, there were many witnesses coming forward with reports of UNMNTF and UNISF Troops working alongside the Army of the Republic of Mexico Soldiers in the New Orleans area.

When the day of Martial Law comes in America, the UNISF and UNMNTF troops located in Central America, in the US, and Canada will be deployed to help round up the millions of Americans whose names appear on the CIA Red List and the CIA Blue List. These troops are Chinese, Russian, German, Polish, Japanese, Ukrainian, Saudi Arabian, Pakistani, Mexican, Honduran, Salvadorean and Chilean, and many are stationed in the deep underground military bases. When that day comes in America, do not expect the Fox News Network, NBC, CBS, ABC, CNN, BBC News 24 or Reuters to give a full or accurate account of the truth. Mass detentions in camps and the underground bases, along with mass executions will occur, like they have in many other countries like Cambodia, Russia, China, Germany, Poland, Armenia, Georgia, Belorussia, Hungary and the Ukraine over the past 100 years. The best option for many Americans will be to have a safe place in a remote area where you can hide.

Our local FBI offices are all about protecting your communities.

The FBI has 56 field offices (also called divisions) centrally located in major metropolitan areas across the U.S. and Puerto Rico. They are the places where we carry out investigations, assess local and regional crime threats, and work closely with partners on cases and operations. Each field office is overseen by a special agent in charge, except our offices in Los Angeles, New York City, and Washington, D.C., which are headed by an assistant director in charge due to their large size. Within these field offices are a total of about 380 resident agencies located in smaller cities and towns. Resident agencies are managed by supervisory special agents.

U.S. intelligence agencies have a direct tap into the central servers of top U.S. Internet companies, letting agents trawl for suspicious activity, sources have confirmed to NBC News. The highly classified program, which is called PRISM and run by the National Security Agency and the FBI, was first reported Thursday evening by The Washington Post — which reported that it had obtained an internal NSA presentation on the program — and by The Guardian. According to NBC News' sources, PRISM lets agents cull audio, video, photos, emails, documents and connection logs in order to track Internet users' contacts. It was designed, they said, to look at international communications, but they disputed the Post's report that the program engaged in "data mining," saying it instead engaged in "data collection." Companies contacted by NBC News — including digital giants like Google, Facebook, Apple, Microsoft and Yahoo — denied knowledge of the program; however, the presentation obtained by the Post described the program as a "partnership" with tech companies. Andrea Keeps Weakening Moving Inland Over Northern Fla.

Tropical Storm Andrea

Tropical Storm Andrea continued weakening as it moved inland over northern Florida Thursday in the hours after it made landfall along Florida's Big Bend region, the National Hurricane Center in Miami said. As of 11 p.m. ET, the storm was located about 40 miles west of Jacksonville and about 65 miles east-southeast of Valdosta, Georgia. It was moving northeast at 15 mph, with maximum sustained winds of 45 mph. That was down from the maximum sustained winds of 65 mph that Andrea had when it made landfall in Dixie County, about 10 miles south of Steinhatchee, at 5:40 p.m. Little further change in strength is expected during the next 48 hours, the National Hurricane Center said, but
